

How to Teach Drop

Practical Uses

Drop is useful in a number of situations:

- It is more comfortable for your dog to stay a 'drop' position for longer periods of time
- It is more difficult for a dog to get up out of a 'drop' than a 'sit'
- Teaching 'drop' helps elevate your position as a leader
- Teach your dog to drop as a substitute for problem behaviour such as jumping up, door-dashing or leaping out of cars (i.e. your dog cannot 'drop' and jump on you simultaneously!)

Method

1. Hold a treat (or toy) in your fingers and put the treat near your dog's nose.
2. SLOWLY move the treat down toward the ground and out along the ground away from the dog in an 'L' shape.
3. Your dog should follow the treat and his body should drop to the ground.
4. As his belly hits the floor mark (say 'Yes!') immediately and reward.
5. Allow him to move around and repeat steps 1-4 until he offers a drop in response to your hand movement. (DO NOT use a verbal command to drop until you have the behaviour happening CONSISTENTLY in response to your hand signal.)
6. Try using a hand signal (palm facing down, slowly move your hand from your waist in a downward movement) WITHOUT a food treat. Use a treat as a reward rather than a lure.
7. When your dog responds 8 times out of 10 tries to a hand signal alone THEN you are ready to start naming the 'Drop'. Say 'Drop' immediately before you give the dog a hand signal to drop. Mark and reward.

How to Teach Drop

Troubleshooting

1. Your dog keeps getting up to get the treat

You may be holding the treat too high. Think of the treat as a magnet to your dog's nose.

Sometimes the above method is not enough to lure a drop into a drop. Try one of the following methods instead:

- a) SLOWLY move the treat down toward the ground and IN TOWARDS THE DOG the dog in a reverse 'L' shape. This should topple your dog off balance and he should drop.
- b) Sit on the floor with your legs out in front of you and lure your dog under your bent knees with a treat.
- c) Lure your dog underneath the rungs of a sturdy chair.
- d) Feed him at the ground several times in a row. Many dogs will automatically drop after being fed at ground level.

2. Your dog gets over excited by the food and tries to dislodge it from your hand with his paw or teeth.

Hold the food close to your chest and turn your head away (withdraw attention) until he settles down. Repeat until he settles. You may also want to try a more boring treat!

3. Your dog is distracted and is not interested in the treat

Try using a toy instead. Try training in a more boring environment where there is nothing else for the dog to focus on (e.g. bathroom, laundry etc). Try this exercise before dinner when your dog is hungry.
